Haryana's Agri-Business and Food Processing Policy 2018 included assistance for individual processing units in C and D category blocks. This state-policy route is distinct from MoFPI's central CEFPPC scheme, even though both can appear in searches for food-processing unit assistance.

The June 2023 state amendment expressly addresses new, expansion and diversification units in those blocks, with the stated change effective from 19 October 2021. The location and investment history therefore matter when identifying an older project's scheme basis.

The policy version is part of the assessment

Haryana notified a new Agri-Business and Food Processing Policy on 29 May 2026, superseding the 2018 policy. The older unit-assistance provision should be used as a historical reference, with transition provisions and operative implementing instructions checked for the actual project.

The 2023 amendment alone does not provide the full unit-scheme cost definition, procedure or benefit calculation. A percentage taken from the central scheme or an unrelated state policy cannot fill that gap. An earlier sanction or complete implementing notification is needed before a dependable amount can be established.

Define the investment being claimed

For a new unit, identify the product, process, site, machinery and production date. For an expansion or diversification, preserve the original capacity and assets alongside the additional investment. This makes it possible to distinguish a qualifying project from routine replacement or maintenance.

Prepare the location and block evidence, land documents, registrations, machinery invoices, technical civil costs, payments and financing. Connect each asset to the processing activity and keep excluded or unrelated expenditure separate pending the scheme-specific assessment.

Reviewing a historic application

Bring the original application, acknowledgement, eligibility order, sanction and correspondence into one chronology. Record what was claimed, what was approved, what has been paid and the precise issue still outstanding. Those facts help establish the correct transition and procedural question.
